Upgrading your subscription to The Sims Resource's annual plan for just $24 can get you four free months of VIP! Are you tired of the same old food in The Sims 4? Want to add some culture or realism to the recipes? This list features the best custom food recipes that are a must-have for your CC folder. You'll be impressed by these talented creators, and who knows, you might even get hungry! The majority of these recipes look way better than what EA has offered in-game - no offense intended, it's just the truth. You'll see the same creator names popping up throughout this list because there are only a few Sims 4 custom food specialists out there. Be sure to support their Patreon accounts if you can; they do so much for our gaming community. This post combines homestyle recipes, gourmet options, and baking delights - all actual custom recipes that your Sims can make when they reach the required cooking skill level. Some of these dishes require Sims 4 recipe mods to work properly, but don't worry, it's usually just one extra mod needed for all of a creator's custom food. So, be sure to read the download page carefully and get everything right. Now, without further ado, here are the best Sims 4 custom foods! A Must-Have Bibimbap Food CC for Your Sims! If you're on the hunt for authentic Korean cuisine in The Sims 4, you won't want to miss this incredible bibimbap food cc! As someone who's obsessed with this dish, I can confidently say it's one of my all-time favorite Korean meals. And the best part? It's not only delicious but also filling, healthy, and easy to make - even for beginners! To get started, you'll need a recipe mod, which is conveniently linked on the download page. Your Sims will need to be at least level 1 in cooking skill to create this masterpiece, making it perfect for new culinary adventurers. By the way, who else remembers whipping up Ratatouille in The Sims 2 or 3? Ah, those were the days! This bibimbap dish might not be a real-life favorite of mine (yet!), but my Sims sure love it! For vegetarian Sims, this recipe is a game-changer - no cooking skills required! And did I mention you'll also get three types of overnight oats: Banana choco, Honey nut, and Raspberry Almond? YUM! Risotto anyone? This Sims 4 version is a mouth-watering vegetarian dish packed with mushrooms and truffle oil (talk about fancy!). I'm not sure what level cooking skill your Sim will need for this one, but rest assured it's a challenge worth taking on! Tamales, anyone? For some authentic Mexican cuisine in The Sims 4, look no further! Your Sim will need to be at least level 7 in cooking skill to get these yummy vegetarian tamales just right. And finally, can we please talk about how amazing custom food cc creators are for making those extra steps and ingredients? I mean, wow - it's incredible! Last but not least, this cowplant cake deserves a shoutout! Who wouldn't want a cowplant-themed birthday party for their Sims kids? If you're planning a backyard BBQ or a 4th of July party, these BBQ ribs and baked beans are the perfect recipe to impress your guests! And the best part? Your Sim only needs to be at level 1 in cooking skill to make this masterpiece. Throwing together some tasty eats for an event? This Sims 4 custom food pack's got you covered! It comes with three bubble teas - Taro, Brown Sugar, & Matcha. These popular drinks originated in Taiwan and are now loved by many in the US. If you're craving more Asian vibes or unique drinks for your Sims game, this is a must-have! Meanwhile, who wouldn't want chicken and waffles? A southern classic that's as confusing as it is irresistible. Why not give your Sims a taste of it too? This recipe only needs a level 2 cooking skill and comes in single, family, and party sizes. For some Korean flair, this kimchi soup is packed with nutrients and flavor! It's the perfect blend of fermented goodness, gochujang, noodles, and mushroom stock. And for the ultimate foodie Sims, there's a wagyu steak recipe that demands a level 10 gourmet cooking skill. This luxurious dish from Japan promises an unparalleled dining experience. Need something more comforting? This custom stuffed peppers dish is perfect for any occasion, whether it's a restaurant night or a first date dinner. With a required level 5 cooking skill and some fresh veggies like bell peppers and tomatoes, you'll be serving up culinary bliss! If your Sim loves baking, these cream puff doughnuts are a dream come true - just remember to master that level 7 baking skill first! Finally, for the holidays, this custom pumpkin pie recipe is a Thanksgiving treat. It requires a level 4 baking skill and includes brand-new ingredients like pastry flour, whipped butter, and spiced pumpkin. Last but not least, here's a vegetarian Pad Thai recipe to spice up your Sims game with some authentic Asian flavors! This food item comes in multiple options, including single and party serving sizes, as well as a custom snack version! To make it, your Sim needs a cooking skill level of at least 6 unless they're having the snack version. It's perfect for sim parties and gatherings. You might be thinking that Deviled Eggs are weird, but they're actually a staple in some areas, like my home state of Ohio. They can be super yummy if made right, though! Let me know in the comments if you've had them before or think they sound crazy. I was so done with the cakes included in the Sims 4 that I just had to have this custom birthday cake! It's a gorgeous white confetti cake that only requires a level 3 cooking skill. Trust me, you need it! This Bread and Butter Pudding is a traditional British dish perfect for Cottage Living gameplay. Don't worry; it's vegetarian-safe and tagged as a dessert. To make it, your Sim needs to have a cooking skill level of at least 5. If you're looking to add some Bayou culture to your game, this Crawfish Boil custom food is just what you need! The creator did an amazing job on this dish, and when your Sim eats it, they'll even grab a little crawfish! For all you Sims fans who love custom Asian foods, this chicken curry recipe (with its vegetarian version made with tempeh) is a must-have! Who doesn't love milkshakes, right? These adorable custom milkshakes for the Sims 4 come in banana, chocolate, and strawberry flavors - perfect for a diner menu! Another delicious custom Asian food dish is egg drop soup. It's not vegetarian and comes in all three serving sizes. To make it, your Sim needs to have a cooking skill level of at least 6. OMG! I'm obsessed with buffalo chicken so I knew this buffalo chicken pizza had to be included on the list! It looks incredible and only requires a level 3 cooking skill. Does anyone else absolutely love all things buffalo chicken? This custom Sims 4 cake really caught my eye - it's stunning! It would be perfect for a black & white party or as a sim's birthday cake, maybe even a wedding cake? Toddler food options are seriously lacking in The Sims 4, but Littlebowbub has come to the rescue with a set of custom toddler foods that are absolutely adorable. You can find these cute macaroni & cheese dishes and cheesecakes on their page. They also offer kimchi fried rice with a custom cooking process and ingredients for added variety. In addition, they provide gender reveal cakes for pregnant Sims, complete with blue or pink icing to reveal the baby's gender. To know the gender of your Sim's baby, you'll need mods, so be sure to check out my pregnancy mods post. The pack also includes a custom wedding cake that requires a level 8 cooking skill and beautiful flowers draping down its four tiers. You can also download custom cakes for pride celebrations, including non-binary galaxy cakes, rainbow sprinkle cakes, genderless flower cakes, and marble cakes. These custom foods are just a few of the many options available in The Sims 4. If you have any favorite mods or suggestions, feel free to leave them in the comments below! Custom food options
